On the 25th day of this month, the Kentucky Monument will be dedicated at Chickamauga Park. It is erected by legislative authority in common honor of the Kentucky Union & Confederate soldiers living and dead, who more than a third of a century ago contended with each other on that bloody field, and by their bravery and heroism reflected undying credit on their native State.

In no other battle during the Civil War were engaged so many soldiers from this State. Such an occasion will never again be presented, for never will our people engage in such another conflict, and after it has ceased, forgetful of all, save its glories which are our common heritage, meet to pay equal tribute to contending factions. Love and reverence for the dead, respect and admiration for the living, alike demand that this dedication, in point of numbers, respectability and fervid patriotism, shall be such as will be creditable to the State, draw the people more closely together in the bonds of brotherly love and prove an inspiration to future generations.

For the accomplishment of these noble purposes, the various societies and orders throughout the Commonwealth are requested to send representative uniformed bodies, and the citizens generally are most earnestly invited to attend.

Done at Frankfort, on the 4th day of November A. D. Eighteen Hundred & Ninety Eight and the one hundred and seventh year of the Commonwealth.

William O. Bradley.

The Commonwealth of Kentucky,

Executive Department, Frankfort, November 23rd Cont. 1898

He commuted the sentence of G. A. Portwood convicted of murder in Fayette County June 1898, from death by hanging to imprisonment at hard labor for life, indorsing the following upon the papers:—

"Chief Justice Lewis of the Court of Appeals says in a letter this day received the finding of the jury on the issue of sanity had necessarily to be affirmed because there was evidence to sustain it. Nevertheless, there was evidence tending strongly to show, that the accused was, at the time he committed the act, insane, and I therefore think and suggest to your Excellency a commutation of his punishment to confinement to the penitentiary for life, would be proper. In this opinion the other Judges concur.

I have carefully read the record and it demonstrates several cases of insanity in the family, the father of Portwood having died in the asylum. Many well authenticated instances appear in which defendant's acts cannot be accounted for, save upon the theory of insanity, among them efforts to commit suicide.

The premises considered, his sentence and punishment are now commuted to confinement at labor in the penitentiary for and during his life, and the Sheriff of Fayette County is now ordered to suspend his execution and convey the defendant to the penitentiary at Frankfort and there deliver him to the Warden of said penitentiary. This November 23rd 1898. William O. Bradley, Governor of Ky."
