The Life and Family of Lt. Gov. John Caldwell

By Sandy Caldwell

The author is a g-g-g-granddaughter of Lt. Gov. Caldwell.

John Caldwell, the eldest son of Robert Caldwell and Mary Logan, was born September 22, 1758, in Charlotte County, Va. Just before moving to Kentucky with the rest of the Caldwell family, John Caldwell married Judith Smith (b. 1765), a daughter of John Smith and Ann Neasum, on August 6, 1781, in Charlotte County. At the time of their marriage, John Caldwell was the legal guardian of Judith Smith.

After moving to the Nelson County, Ky., area, John Caldwell pursued military, business, and political interests and rose to a position a great prominence in the early days of Kentucky. Despite starting his military career as a private, he rose to the rank of major general in 1793.

Most notably, General Caldwell, along with 350-400 men under his command, served under General Anthony Wayne in the Battle of Fallen Timbers. The battle, which took place on August 20, 1794, about 11 miles south of Toledo, is celebrated as the beginning of the state of Ohio. In one hour, frontiersmen defeated a force of about 2,000 Indians, clearing the way for settlement and the eventual statehood of Ohio in 1803.

Caldwell also pursued political leadership in Kentucky. He represented Nelson County in the 1787 and 1788 statehood conventions held in Danville and as its first state senator. When Kentucky became a state in 1792, Washington County was formed from Nelson County and the land occupied by the Caldwell family fell into the county. He was elected as the 1st Senator of Nelson County in 1792 and in 1796, was became a member of the state House, representing Washington County.

Before the end of the latter year, however, he—along with Rev. Terah Templin, led a group of settlers to the western most part of what was then Logan County. The land became Christian County later that year.

On July 16, 1798, John Caldwell of Christian County was appointed by President John Quincy Adams to serve as a commissioner to provide for the valuation of lands and houses, and for the enumeration of slaves in his jurisdiction. Later than year, Caldwell's land became part of the new Livingston County, which was formed from a portion of Christian County.

The election of 1801 was a joyous occasion in the Caldwell family because Caldwell returned to the state senate, this time representing Livingston, Henderson, Muhlenburg, and Ohio Counties, and his brother, Robert Caldwell, was elected a senator for Madison County.¹

At some point during 1803, Caldwell made the decision to run for lieutenant governor. On July 31, 1804, Caldwell published a letter to the state's citizens, announcing his intentions. He won and became the second lieutenant governor of Kentucky, but the first to be elected by popular vote.

Lt. Gov. John Caldwell and his family were still Livingston County residents at the time of his death on November 9, 1804, in Frankfort. The 1804 Livingston County tax list showed Caldwell with 600 acres, 10 blacks, seven horses, two white males 21 or over, and one white male 16-20. Caldwell and his wife Judith had three sons and one daughter.

When a new county was formed from Livingston County on May 1, 1809, the state named it in Caldwell's honor. He was a man who had dedicated his adult life to serving the citizens of Kentucky. In 1831, the Kentucky Legislature erected a monument to honor Lt. Governor John Caldwell in the Frankfort Cemetery.²

On August 3, 1808, the widowed Judith Caldwell married Alexander Johnston. The marriage ceremony was officiated by Rev. Terah Templin. Livingston County's 1809 tax list shows Alexander Johnston with 200 acres entered and surveyed in his own name and 200 acres on Livingston Creek entered in the name of John Caldwell.

Poor Judith, this must have been a very unhappy marriage since she left Alexander Johnston prior to February 28, 1810. In response, Johnston posted an ad on February 28, 1810, in Russellville's The Farmer's Friend newspaper, stating that Judith "left my bed and board without any just cause, and has gone to live with her friends." He warned "all persons from Crediting her on my [account], as I am determined to pay no debt of her contracting."³

The 200 acres of John Caldwell does not appear with Alexander Johnston in the 1810 Livingston County, Kentucky tax list. Johnston must have died that year as well. In August and September 1810, Alexander Johnston, a Revolutionary War veteran who was advanced in years, transferred his estate to his children, Mary and Thomas, in return for his care. No records have been found to exist for Judith Caldwell Johnston after 1810, so it is likely that she also died in this year.

Hiram McDaniel on July 19, 1819, in Livingston County, certified that Robert S. Caldwell, Terah T. Caldwell, Nancy Ross, and John Caldwell were the proper and only heirs of John Caldwell, deceased, with satisfactory proof made that he died without any last will and testament.

The children of John and Judith Caldwell remained in the area until the War of 1812, when they went their separate ways.

Robert Smith Caldwell

Robert Smith Caldwell (b. 1 July 1783), the eldest child of John Caldwell and Judith Johnston, was assigned 56 acres from his mother's property on 1 April 1805, on the same day she was appointed administratrix of her deceased husband's estate. Later that year, on July 30, Robert married Mary "Polly" Shelby, with the ceremony officiated by Rev. Terah Templin. Mary Shelby (b. 26 April 1785, N.C.) was a daughter of Moses Shelby and Elizabeth Neel.

In March 1807, Robert S. Caldwell served as an ensign in the 24th Regiment of the Kentucky Militia. Moses Shelby Jr. was captain of the regiment.

On 14 May 1810, Robert took the oath prescribed by law to take the list of taxable property in Captain Moses Graham's company. He also served as a Livingston County constable after posting a bond of $500 on 27 August 1810.

Between 1811 and 1813, Robert and his family moved to Claiborne County, Miss., with the Shelybs.

Robert served in Lt. Col. Neilson's and Capt. Francis Woods' companies in the Mississippi Militia; companies that were reinforcements after the Battle of New Orleans. Robert's regiment was under the command of General Andrew Jackson.

Robert Smith Caldwell died on 10 August 1830 in Claiborne County. After his death, Mary Shelby Caldwell—along with her daughters Julia, Jane, Mary, and Susan—moved from Claiborne County to Sabine Parish, La. Mary Shelby Caldwell died on 1 June 1847 and is buried in Victoria Cemetery in Sabine Parish. Her tombstone reads "Mary Shelby, consort of R.S. Caldwell, died June 1, 1847, age 64."

Her will was made on 3 May 1847, naming son John Shelby Caldwell as executor. An inventory of the estate shows 109 acres of land and buildings, six slaves, livestock, cash, notes and 2/3 interest in a cotton gin, all with a value of $7,072.28.

Robert and Mary had the following children:

1. John Shelby (b. 25 August 1806, Livingston County, Ky., d. January 1874, Sabine Parish, La.), who married Matilda Cook (b. 1820, Miss., d. 1882, Sabine Parish, La.). John and Matilda are both buried in Victoria Cemetery in Sabine Parish.

2. Elizabeth Penelope (b. 11 May 1809, Livingston County, Ky., d. 4 April 1862, Madison County, Miss.), who married Aaron Lovett Neel on 20 December 1827 in Claiborne County, Miss.

3. Jane E. (b. 27 March 1811, Livingston County, Ky.), who married 1. C.B. Howard on 30 September 1831 in Claiborne County, Miss., and 2. Capt. _____ Ravel before moving to Texas.

4. Minerva S. (b. 13 July 1813, Claiborne County, Miss.)

5. Julia S. (b. 2 September 1815, Claiborne County, Miss.), who married Marcellus Branch on 7 October 1835 in Madison County, Miss. (After Julia's death, Marcellus married her sister Mary.)

6. Moses S. (b. 9 September 1818, Claiborne County, Miss., d. 6 March 1832), who died at age 14, is buried in Pisgah Cemetery in Claiborne County, Miss.

7. Robert Seaton Caldwell (b. 21 October 1820, Claiborne County, Miss., d. 4 August 1824), who is buried in Pisgah Cemetery in Claiborne County, Miss.

8. Mary L. Caldwell (b. 1824, Claiborne County, Miss.), who married 1. Peter Ragan and 2. Marcellus Branch.

9. Susan A. Caldwell (b. 3 October 1827, Claiborne County, Miss.), who married Joseph B. Elam and moved with him to Sabine Parish, La.

Nancy Caldwell

Nancy Caldwell (b. about 1786), the only known daughter of John and Judith Caldwell, married Jeremiah Walker on 8 May 1805 in Livingston County, Ky. The ceremony was officiated by Rev. Terah Templin.

On 8 October 1805, Jeremiah Walker was appointed jailer of Livingston County. He removed 352 acres of certificate 1163 on 5 November 1805.

The 1810 Livingston County census listing for Jeremiah Walker shows one white male 16-26, one white female 16-26, and two white females under the age of 10.

Nancy Caldwell and Jeremiah Walker witnessed several land transactions on behalf of the Franklin Academy along with General John Caldwell. These land transactions were recorded in Livingston and Washington counties.

Jeremiah Walker does not appear on the Livingston County tax list after 1812. In 1809, he signed a petition in Washington County, Miss., regarding the pre-emption rights of the settlers to public lands. Walker died prior to 1819, since the estate record of John Caldwell in Livingston County, Ky., dated 19 July 1819, listed Nancy Ross as an heir of John Caldwell.

John Caldwell

John Caldwell (b. 1788) is a bit of a mystery. He turned 16 in 1804, which would place his birth year in 1788. What became of him is not known with certainty.

There was a John William Caldwell, a teacher and constable in Claiborne County, Miss., who died in 1833. This John William Caldwell was one of the administrators of the estate of Robert Smith Caldwell and John received a fee of 10 percent for settling the estate. Perhaps further research will be able to confirm if this John William Caldwell is a brother of Robert Smith Caldwell and a son of General John Caldwell.

Terah Templin Caldwell

Terah Templin Caldwell (b. 23 March 1793) youngest child of John and Judith Caldwell, was apparently the only son to remain in Kentucky. He served in the War of 1812 and was a private in Captain James Cooke's company of the 6th Regiment in

Kentucky.

After the war, Terah Templin Caldwell returned to Washington County, Ky., where he married Harriet Smith (b. 8 August 1800), a daughter of James Smith and Mary Edelin, on 15 July 1819. (Note: Harriet was unrelated to the Smith line of Caldwell's mother.)

Terah Templin and Harriet raised a family in Washington County (later Marion County). Their children were:

1. Nancy (b. about 1820 in Washington County), who married Hillsborough Bidwell (b. 1817, d. 1902, Owensboro, Ky.) and, by 1870, moved to Daviess County, Ky.

2. Mary J. (b. about 1822, Washington County), who married 1. John McBride (b. about 1804, Ky., d. before 16 October 1860) and moved to Boone County, Mo., about 1854. McBride's will was probated in Boone County, Mo., on 16 October 1860 and provided expenses to cover moving his wife Mary J. McBride and her three children to Marion County, Ky. After moving back to Marion County, Mary married 2. Francis P. Smith (b. about 1828, Knox County, Ky.) at her residence on 24 January 1865. Smith was and was a resident of Adair County, Ky., at the time of the marriage. It was a second marriage for both the bride and groom.

3. John Robert (b. 1824, Washington County), who married Cecilia "Margaret" Columbia Gough (b. 1847, Marion County, Ky.) on May 30, 1865 in Marion County and later moved to Missouri. He had a son named John Robert Caldwell Jr.

4. Elizabeth (b. 1826, Washington County, d. 1882, Marion County, Ky.). She did not marry and willed the remainder of her inheritance bequeathed to her from her uncle, Felix Smith, to her brothers and sisters. To her brother, James, she willed her buggy.

5. James Smith (b. 3 January 1829, d. 8 September 1885, Marion County), who married Emily Jane Abell (b. 1836, d. 3 October 1881, Marion County) on September 30, 1859 in Marion County.

6. Lucy Ann (b. 1831, Washington County, d. before 14 July 1882), who married William Fenton

(b. 1839, Lancaster, England, d. before 8 February 1876) on February 2, 1864 in Marion County and 2. Henry A. Cissell on 8 February 1876 at St. Augustine's Church in Lebanon, Ky.

7. Matilda (b. 25 November 1833, d. 12 September 1897, Marion County), who married James Abell (b. 15 January 1809, d. 1 November 1876, Marion County) on 12 May 1857 in Marion County. Both are buried in the Holy Name of Mary Cemetery in Marion County.

8. Sarah (b. 23 August 1834, d. 3 September 1852, Marion County), who did not marry and died at a rather young age. She is buried in the Holy Name of Mary Cemetery in Marion County.

9. William (b. 1836, d. 3 January 1918, Marion County), who married Nancy Bland (b. 1838, d. 1903, Marion County) on 24 January 1860 in Marion County. Both are buried in the St. Augustine Cemetery in Lebanon.

Each of the children named above received a distribution of $1,454.95 from the estate of their uncle, Felix Smith, with the exception of Sarah who was not living at the time of his death. Lucy Ann and Elizabeth Caldwell received an additional bequest of a $1,500 trust each.

After living a quiet life as a farmer, Terah Templin Caldwell died in Marion County, Kentucky on 1 December 1868 and is buried in the Old Holy Name of Mary Cemetery. He is buried next to his wife, Harriet Caldwell, who died on 14 December 1852.

Through his children, the descendants of General John Caldwell are numerous and live from coast to coast. May his pioneering spirit live on in each of them.

May 1793 letter to Governor Isaac Shelby

Sir

I request your favour, a few days since, in which you informed me the scouts ought not to be continued under your former orders. I am at a loss to know whether you intended me to discharge them immediately, or best to continue them in service under the authority of my ____ and at the expense of the United States.

But under the authority and at the expense of this state, and then a change made by the commanding general on the Ohio was made known and have therefore taken the liberty in deciding in ___ what to do, to continue them in service pleading the time they were mustered for, which is not many days more and then to discontinue them unless I should receive further instructions. Should I have acted amiss in this matter, I trust you will excuse me. What determined me firmly to continue the scouts until the time for which they were mustered for was from my knowledge of the situation and intentions of the frontier inhabitants of the Rolling Fork. They are much opposed (of the withdrawal of scouts and guards) which you are not a stranger to, and they are determined ----- settlements below the mouth of the South Fork to leave their homes and seek shelter in a place of more safety as soon as the scouts and guards is withdrawn.

Although there has not been any late discoveries made of Indians in that quarter, yet having the same opportunity of coming as formerly, I have taken the liberty to order another guard which I shall send out unless your Excellency orders me to the contrary.

I am with the greatest respect, your Excellency's humble servant,

John Caldwell

P.S. I have made out the muster roll and would have sent them to you (supposing they must be signed by yourself) before this time, but imagined it could make no difference until I go up myself which will be very shortly.

First Methodist Presbyterian Church, Eminence, 1877-1925

By Bettyann Noe Keiser

Collins' History of Kentucky includes a biography of the Rev. Archibald Cameron, who is credited with the establishment of the Six Miles or Pleasureville Presbyterian Church. This article states that Cameron was born in Scotland about 1770 and was brought to America when very young. The family came to Kentucky from Pennsylvania about 1781 and settled on a farm about six miles from Bardstown. Archibald's education was not neglected and he began the study of Latin and Greek with this eldest brother, Angus Cameron, who had received a thorough education before the family left Scotland.

While the Cameron family was traveling in this direction, another group, whose destiny was to entwine with that of this youngest Cameron Boy, was also looking for lands to settle. This group were of Holland Dutch and French Huguenot background, and for 200 years in New Jersey and New Amsterdam, had maintained their identity, their church, and their language.

In an attempt to distance themselves from English "foreigners," this group formed a colony known as Conewago in Adams County, Penn., which also began to be crowded by "others." Turning their attention again toward the frontier, they dreamed of a place in Kentucky where enough land could be purchased to accommodate the colony for generations. Emissaries were sent to Beargrass Creek near Louisville, where some families purchased land and settled. Other took up residence in what is now Madison County, Ky., and arrangements were made for the two group to meet in early 1781. After an Indian attack known as the "Dutch Defeat," however, they moved their family to yet another "Low Dutch" Station near Harrodsburg.

Squire Boone had entered some 12,000 acres in Shelby County on a Virginia treasury warrant. This land bordered on Drennon's and Six Mile Creek, Squire Boone had entered some 12,000 acres in Shelby County on a Virginia treasury warrant. This land bordered on Drennon's and Six Mile Creek, about six miles east of his Painted Stone Station. Boone knew of the Low Dutch colony's desire to purchase many acres in one tract, and had the perfect spot. The Dutch appointed Abraham Banta as their agent and ultimately purchased some 8,000 acres. At this time, not a single acre had been purchased by a Dutch family in the Mercer County area and the entire community planned on occupying the Henry-Shelby County tract.

about six miles east of his Painted Stone Station. Boone knew of the Low Dutch colony's desire to purchase many acres in one tract, and had the perfect spot. The Dutch appointed Abraham Banta as their agent and ultimately purchased some 8,000 acres. At this time, not a single acre had been purchased by a Dutch family in the Mercer County area and the entire community planned on occupying the Henry-Shelby County tract.¹

Indian troubles persisted, and it was not until 1794 or 1795 that settlement could be established on a permanent basis. By the, many members had purchased land in Mercer County. According to Elsa M. Banta, only about 34 of the 85 Low Dutch families who had come to Kentucky finally settled on the Low Dutch Tract.²

The Harrodsburg group organized a Dutch Reform Church and built the Old Mud Meeting House in 1800.³

In the Henry-Shelby County settlement, members built Six Mile Run church in Banta Town. This site was marked by the Daughters of the American Revolution in 1939 as the "religious and civic center of the Low Dutch Colony." A state historical marker replaced the DAR's version.⁴

Both groups attempted to obtain Dutch Reform minister who spoke both the Dutch and English languages. Because of the difficulty of drawing such ministers to the frontier, both churches defected to the Presbyterians, whose forms of worship were very similar. Later, many families from both the Harrodsburg and Pleasureville communities moved to Johnson County, Ind. Surveys of the cemeteries in all three of these locations repeat the same names. In the Dutch Tract Cemetery in Pleasureville are found the surnames of Akers, Arnsparger, Aynes, Banta, Bergen, Demaree, Hower, Johnston, List, Montfort, Shaw, Shuck, Voris, VanNuys/Vannice, among many others, some of which are also found in the admissions and dismissions listings.⁵

While these travels and travails were being endured by the Low Dutch, Archibald Cameron was at Transylvania Seminary studying theology under the Rev. David Rice. Cameron was licensed as a Presbyterian minister by Transylvania Presbytery on Feb. 14, 1795. His Collins biography states that "He preached at many points in the counties of Nelson, Shelby and Jefferson where he laid the foundations of Presbyterianism. ... His labors were spread over a wide region, now occupied by the congregations of Shelbyville, Mulberry, Six Miles, Shiloh, Olivet, and Big Spring, and embracing a circuit of from thirty to forty miles. All these churches were planted and built up by him."

The earliest Session Book of the Pleasureville (Banta Town) Church is a small book with yellowed pages and faded ink, written partly in the elegant and very legible handwriting of Samuel Demaree. Later scribes wrote more hurriedly and with a pen, which literally skipped along and ink that faded badly; but the history contained therein is invaluable. The clerks are sometimes admonished by Presbytery for various failings, members are chastised for unbecoming conduct, elders are perplexed by the necessity of conducting baptisms without the assistance of an ordained minister, etc.⁶

of Sixmile commencing with the year of our Lord, 1829." One example gives a history of the church:

Any Record kept previous to this time was very imperfect, or is lost or mislaid. A brief summary of the church can only by recollection be given from its organization up to this time. It appears that the sixmile church was organized in the year 1799 or 1800, by the Rev. Mr. Archibald Cameron, who attended the church as a supply for thirty years or nearly son. Mr. Albert Voris & Mr. John Voris were elected and ordained the first elders, after a considerable time, Mr. John Voris Joined the Shakers & left the bounds of the congregation sometime afterward. Mr. Peter Banta was Elected and ordained an Elder in his place. The church increasing in number, & the Elders aged & getting infirm, insisted that one or two additional Elders Should be appointed, & Mr. Geo. List & Sam'l Demaree, were elected & ordained, Ruling Elders, & Mr. Andrew Conine, a Deacon in said church. The church was small when first Organized but during the great Revival near the commencement of the nineteenth Century, It increased considerably about the year 1806 & until the year 1810. There were several families (together with John Voris the former Elder) broke off & Joined the Shakers & some others the New Lights. Since that time considerable additions have been made to the church. Death, Removals etc. In the younger members moving to a new country had continued to diminish their number. However in the late revival a considerable number received [sic] to the communion of the church,

by Rev. W.K. Patterson and Rev. Chas. R. Hemphill.

1903, May 20. (The writers have frequently been perplexed by the date of a person's admission to the church with a later date of baptism.) ON this date in 1903, the procedure is elaborated upon. Members of the Six Mile/Presbyterian Church of Pleasureville

After April 1834, Samuel Demaree's name no longer appears as clerk of the session. Beginning in July 1835, the minutes were written by George Bergen, whose script was not as legible and who used various spelling of names. There are spelling variations of several surnames, including Monfort/Montfort/Munfort, Pogue/Poge, and Priestler/Priceler. Six Mile Presbyterian Church became the Pleasureville Prebyterian Church on Sept. 10, 1857. On pages 200-204 of the 1902-1925) session book of the First Presbyterian Church of Pleasureville, there is a "Roll of Resident Communicants" about whom very little more information is given except for notation such as 'non-resident' or 'dead,' evidently made at a later date. These names are marked with an asterisk. On page 250 is a "Roll of Non-residents," with no information given in the "Remarks" column. Names from this roll are marked with two asterisks. Abbreviations: A=Admitted; C=Minister Called; PC=Presbyterian Church; B=Baptised; D=Dismissal or Death; and PF=Profession of Faith.

The John Baugh Family Cemetery, Logan County

By Ivan W. Baugh

Mr. Baugh's articles have appeared in Volume 39, numbers 1 and 2 and Volume 40, Number 1. He is a descendant of Samuel and Elizabeth Williams Baugh. He gratefully acknowledges the capable collaboration of Claudia M. Borders, a great-great-great-granddaughter of John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh. Without her input, many useful insights would have been overlooked.

As he neared the end of his life, John Baugh (b. 1 May 1774, Shirley Hundred, Va., d. 20 September 1855, Logan County, Ky.) told his family he wanted to be buried next to a certain cedar tree in his cornfield.¹

The burial established the family graveyard at John Baugh's farm in northern Logan County. As family researcher Claudia Borders wrote: "As far as I can tell this acre was set aside in deeds after John's son, Levi, died in 1906 when the property surrounding the cemetery was sold."²

All of the people buried in the cemetery are related except for two Morgan females. Their family came through the area and the females died while the family was in the vicinity.

The cemetery is located about a quarter-mile northeast of 5078 Iron Mountain Road in northern Logan County, the address of the home their grandson, Jeremiah Baugh, built. Today, Elsie Baugh Borders has inherited and purchased some of the land that her great-great-grandfather, John Baugh, owned. The plat drawn by her daughter, Claudia M. Borders, shows the general area. The land that included the original John Baugh home and a nearby spring are not presently a part of Borders' holdings. The Baugh cemetery is also not included in the property she owns, but is adjacent to her holdings.

On the property you will note a place identifying two Indian graves not included in the cemetery. The scant amount of knowledge existing about those graves raises many questions. Family lore reported that Elizabeth Taylor Baugh, wife of John Baugh, was one-half Cherokee, though we have been unable to document this fact. When one looks at her photograph, you see several characteristics typical of those with Indian ancestry. Family lore states that Elizabeth's father or mother (depending on with whom you speak) was a Cherokee Indian and that her parents never married.³ We can only speculate whether the two Indians were related to her.

The cemetery is fenced. It is on one acre with the fenced area approximately 70 feet wide and 170 feet long, with one gate on the side toward the Jeremiah Baugh house. Field stones originally marked the corners of the acre. Claudia Borders added corner posts placed beside the original field stones, which are still in their original positions. The walk to the cemetery from the house is through a field of grass. The family keeps a path mowed across their property toward the cemetery. One is advised to take chigger and tick spray and use it generously on your feet and legs. Even following that advice, this writer got one tick, which he discovered before it could attach itself.

I refer to them as John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh. A younger brother, Samuel Baugh and his wife came to Logan County with them. Samuel married an Elizabeth Williams in South Carolina. When referring to the wives, I include their maiden name to reduce the possibility of confusing the two Elizabeth Baugh women as I did before learning that each of the brothers had a wife named Elizabeth.

The cemetery diagram accompanying this article is based upon a tape recorded interview in the possession of Elsie Dewey Baugh Borders with Molissie Penrod Baugh, wife of Elisha Baugh, son of Jeremiah Baugh, grandson of Levi N. Baugh, and great-grandson of John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh. Her grand daughter, Claudia M. Borders transcribed the information from the tape and used that information to develop the chart showing who is buried where in the cemetery and the relationship to John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh. The diagram includes locations of Cedar trees and a shrub that will help the visitor locate the various rows of graves in the cemetery.

In the diagram you will note that Elizabeth Taylor

Baugh's marker is here, but that she is buried in the Terry cemetery in an unmarked grave. The family has no knowledge why this occurred. It has been speculated that Wolf Lick Creek which runs between the Baugh place and the Terry farm may have been flooded when she passed away and they were unable to bring her body to the Baugh cemetery for interment. Elizabeth died in the spring and the creek often floods in the spring. Figure 2 shows her marker leaning against a Cedar tree beneath which John, her husband, is buried. Rose Ann Penrod Hilderbrand (b. 1826) knew where Elizabeth Taylor Baugh was buried in the Terry Cemetery, according to Molissie Penrod Baugh. The family wonders if Elizabeth was staying with Rose Ann and Alfred Hilderbrand when she died, as their property was across Wolf Lick Creek near the Terry Cemetery.

John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh had nine children. The 1877 *Atlas of Logan County*⁴ helps us locate where Daniel, Mary Frances Baugh Fleming, Levi, and George Nelson lived in the county. Their oldest child, Moses settled in Hopkins County. Their second child, Bartlett, left Logan County in 1857 and settled in the area we know today as Linn County, Kan. Their son, John, left Logan County in 1838, selling his Logan County land to his brother, Bartlett, and settled in Hopkins County. In 1856-57 he sold his Hopkins County land⁵ and joined his brother, Bartlett, on the trip to Kansas, which became a state in 1861. We have good records for their families in Kansas.

Van Allen returned to his Nashville birthplace, where he married Minerva Cabler in on 16 July 1845. John and Elizabeth's third child, Levina, became the second wife of Lewis McPherson. Lewis and Levina had no children, but she raised his six children from his first marriage to Elizabeth Hope.⁶

Susannah McPherson, daughter of Lewis, married Daniel Baugh and another daughter, Nancy, married Levi Baugh. This made their sister, Levina, also their step-mother-in-law.

John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh's youngest daughter, Mary married David Fleming.⁷ David and Mary lived on Jericho Road northwest of Lewisburg. Their youngest child, George Nelson, operated Baugh Station,⁸ which operated as a flag stop on the Owensboro-Russellville Railroad from 1877, when it was constructed, until 1903. This railroad later became a part of the L&N railroad.⁹ In 1901, the name was changed to Diamond Springs.¹⁰ George Sneed developed Diamond Springs site in 1893, possibly taking its name from the quartz- and mica-inlaid rocks the glistened in the stream bed. I do not know if the railroad continued a flag stop at that location after the name change. George Nelson ran a grocery store, post office, and worked as a blacksmith.¹¹

John Baugh (b. 1 May 1774, Shirley Hundred, Va., d. 20 September 1855, Logan County, Ky.) and his wife Elizabeth Taylor Baugh were buried together, at his request, beneath a particular cedar tree on his northern Logan County farm.

Let me make some observations and share some additional information pertinent to those buried here.¹² Buried beside Elisha are his twin sons who died in infancy. The husband of the late Clara "Mae" Gaines Harper married Carrie (name unknown) and they had four girls. We have no information on where he is buried. We do not know if John W. Hancock, husband of Lavina "Alice" Baugh Hancock, married a second time or where he is buried. He died in Michigan City, Ind. The husband of the late Olive A. "Ollie" Baugh Silvey married Lula Belle Penrod on 3 Jan 1912 in Logan County and raised three children. He is buried in the Silvey Graveyard on Iron Mountain Road. Ruby R. Audas was the daughter of Corabell Gaines Audas and grand daughter of John L. and Minerva "Dora" Baugh Gaines.

On U. S. 431 in northern Logan County you will see a Baugh Station General Baptist Church. This church, founded in 1904, took its name from the name of the nearby community. That appears to be the only connection to the Baugh family.¹³

Two of my previous articles in Kentucky Ancestors: "The Baugh Family: Virginia to Kentucky via South Carolina"¹⁴ (Volume 39, Number 1) and "The Baugh Families of Logan County, 1817-1880"¹⁵ (Volume 40, Number 1) provide an overview of the John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh family. The article, "Baugh Families in the Early History of Kentucky"¹⁶ (Volume 39, Number 2) includes information about this family and establishes a connection between some of the Baugh families in other parts of Kentucky before 1850.

I am writing a book on the John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh family. Descendants of John and Elizabeth Taylor Baugh's children are providing significant help in researching the book and contributing to its content. The author welcomes information from all descendants.

Endnotes

¹ John Baugh and his family came to Logan County, KY in 1817. At that time his family consisted of his wife, Elizabeth Taylor Baugh, and 5 children, the youngest, Van Allen, having been born in Tennessee on the journey from South Carolina. By 1824 John had begun purchasing land in northern Logan County. In the years that followed four more children were added to family as well as additional land holdings.

⁴ Wallis Fleming in his book, 75 years of the Fleming family in Arizona: a family history with information on the Fleming family and all related families in Kentucky, Tennessee, and beyond, shows that it was her mother who was a full blooded Cherokee and lists her father's name as Taylor and her mother's name as Elizabeth. No source is given for this information.

Private James A. Johnson's Civil War Letters

Transcribed by Kandie Adkinson

The letters transcribed below are included in the pension file of Private James Armstead Johnson of Bohon, Mercer County (UC – 428115, U.S. National Archives & Records Administration, College Park, Md.). Johnson contracted congestive chills due to exposure and died in February 1863 (death dates vary), in the hospital tent at Camp Lebanon, Lebanon, Ky. He is buried in Grapevine Christian Church Cemetery in Mercer County. Private Johnson was a member of Company I, 9th Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry (Union), during the Civil War. Documents are presented with original spelling and punctuation. A limited number of italicized edits have been added for clarification.

Kentucky Historical Society

The Kentucky Historical Society, founded in 1836, has long been the state's storehouse of history. Today it is the home of the 167,000-square-foot Kentucky History Center in downtown Frankfort. The state-of-the-art facility, which opened in April 1999, is the centerpiece of a campus that offers numerous learning opportunities to students, historians, genealogists, and anyone else interested in Kentucky history.

Museums

The Kentucky Historical Society operates three unique sites in downtown Frankfort that tell the story of our state's history. At the Frankfort facilities and through the Society's outreach programs, the Kentucky story stirs the hearts of over a quarter-million people every year.

The Kentucky Military History Museum (left) houses a collection of artifacts from the state's martial past. It was built in 1850 as the state arsenal. Union and Confederate troops fought to control it during the Civil War. The Old State Capitol, (right) completed about 1830, is a gem of Greek Revival architecture. Designed by Gideon Shryock, it was the first state capitol of its type west of the Appalachian Mountains. It is today operated as a museum and is open for tours.

Kentucky History Center—Home to the Society, this building contains the state history museum, changing exhibit gallery, research library, gift shop, rental facility, and the Society's educational and publications programs.

Old State Capitol—Completed in 1830, this site is a national historic landmark. Its House and Senate chambers, graced by Kentucky paintings and sculpture, tell the story of state government in the commonwealth.

Kentucky Military History Museum—Two centuries of Kentucky's military heritage are traced through an extraordinary collection of weapons, uniforms, flags, and photographs. Housed in the 1850 Old State Arsenal, the museum operates in conjunction with the Kentucky Department of Military Affairs.

Kentucky Historical Society

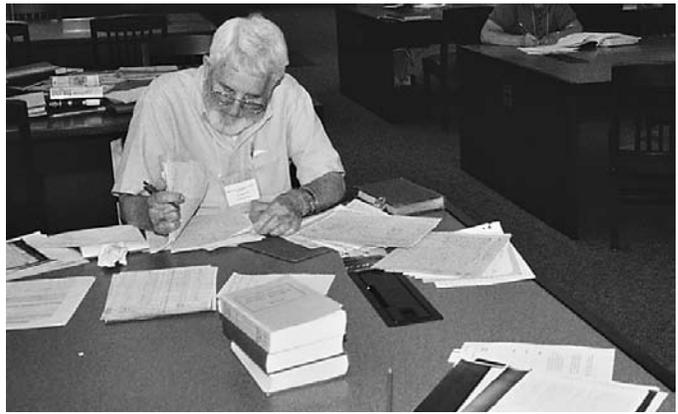

Library & Special Collections

Thousands of researchers blaze their own trail through the historic landscape each year with the assistance of the Society's research facilities. Here genealogists can trace an ancestor's path aided by family histories, census, church, and cemetery records, family Bibles, and land ownership and military service records.

In addition, the Society's Special Collections house hundreds of thousands of manuscripts, photographs, maps, rare books, oral histories, pioneer accounts, diaries, albums, personal recollections, and more—all helping researchers come face-to-face with Kentucky's distinctive heritage.

Publications

The Society publishes books and periodicals that meet the needs of genealogists, historians, and scholars alike. The publications program produces two quarterlies: The Register, a journal of scholarly research in Kentucky history, and Kentucky Ancestors, a genealogical magazine providing statewide coverage for family history researchers. The Society also publishes The Chronicle, a membership newsletter offering information on Society events, exhibits, and programs.

The Library and Special Collections facilities contain the stories of Kentuckians and their families, from the 1700s to the present. Researchers have access to hundreds of thousands of books, records, and photographs.

Education

Every year thousands of people travel to Frankfort from all across America for hands-on tours, interactive exhibits, touch carts, historic character reenactments, family workshops, theatrical presentations, symposia, and festivals that celebrate Kentucky's history. In addition, the education program offers Kentucky history curriculum materials to teachers for use in their classrooms. The Society's outreach programs help people from Ashland to Paducah discover Kentucky's unique past. These programs include the Kentucky Junior Historical Society, Museums To Go, and Historical Highway Markers. Grant and technical assistance activities sponsored by the Folklife, Local History, and Oral History programs give citizens the tools to document and present their own history.

“Doomed to their Fate”: Kentuckians at Dudley’s Defeat, 5 May 1813

By John M. Trowbridge

Trowbridge is manager of the Society’s Kentucky Military History Museum in Frankfort. He is a retired sergeant first class in the U.S. Army. As a military historian, Trowbridge has chronicled the service of numerous important Kentuckians, from medal of honor winners to civil rights activists. His work has been honored by the U.S. Department of Defense, the American Association for State and Local History, and the Historical Confederation of Kentucky. He is the author of Heroes Unsung: Kentucky’s Confederate Medal of Honor and Roll of Honor Recipients and his work has appeared in The Encyclopedia of Kentucky, Kentucky Women, The Military History of the Bluegrass and in various Kentucky newspapers. Trowbridge is a g-g-g-g-grandson of Linsfield Bicknell, a private in Capt. Leslie Combs’ Company, Detachment of Spies, Kentucky Militia, who was wounded and captured on 5 May 1813 and subsequently died in British captivity.

During the War of 1812 (1812-1815) more than 25,000 Kentuckians volunteered for service, totaling 40 regiments of volunteer militia, as well as a number of battalions and separate companies. Americans killed in action during the war totaled 1,876. Of this amount, approximately 1,200, about 64 percent, were from Kentucky.

The Commonwealth’s military service records for the War of 1812 are woefully incomplete and scattered, making it extremely difficult to get a true and accurate accounting of Kentucky soldiers and the sacrifice made by these men.

Kentucky units played key roles in two battles in the northwestern theater of the war: at River Raisin (Frenchtown, present-day Monroe, Mich.) on 18 and 22-23 January 1813, and Fort Meigs, “Dudley’s Defeat,” 28 April-9 May 1813. Both of these battles resulted in the massacre of Kentucky prisoners of war at the hands of their Indian captors.

When news of the massacres reached Kentucky, the legislature authorized Gov. Isaac Shelby to take command of militia reinforcements. Four regiments, under lieutenant colonels William E. Boswell, Samuel Caldwell, ____ Cox, and William Dudley, immediately tendered their services.¹ These four units comprised the brigade commanded by Brig. Gen. Green Clay. The regiments commanded by Caldwell and Cox were soon dispatched to reinforce Maj. Gen. William Henry Harrison at Fort Meigs, a post Harrison had established below the rapids of the

Maumee River (present day Maumee, Ohio). The units reached Fort Meigs on 12 April. The British, under Maj. Gen. Henry Proctor, and their Indian allies, under Tecumseh, moved against the fort in the later part of April and began what has become known as the first siege of the fort on 28 April.

Brig. Gen. Green Clay of Madison County—“one of the richest most powerful men in the state”—was Lt. Col. William Dudley’s commander. Cut off from Dudley when his boat drifted to the opposite bank of the Maumee River, Clay was unaware of the capture and massacre of Dudley’s men.

On 4 May, Clay and the two remaining regiments of his brigade reached Fort Defiance. From here Capt. Leslie Combs with five men made a failed attempt to descend the Maumee River to announce the approach of Clay's command to the garrison at Fort Meigs.

The following is the official report submitted by Clay to Harrison following operations of the 5 May 1813:

*Camp at Fort Meigs,
May 9, 1813.*

SIR – On the 5th inst. about 8 o'clock A. M. descending the Miami of the Lake, about midway the Rapids, with 1200 of the Kentucky troops in eighteen flat bottomed boats, I was met by capt. Hamilton and a subaltern, who delivered me, as he said, the orders of Major General Harrison, to the following effect.

“You must detach about 800 men from your brigade who will land at a point I will show, about one or one and a half miles above the fort, and I will conduct them to the British batteries on the left bank of the river. They must take possession of the enemy's cannon, spike them, cut down the carriages, and return in their boats.”

Observing that the British force at their large batteries was inconsiderable, but their main force was at the old garrison, about one and one half miles below, on the same side of the river. That the Indian forces were chiefly on the right bank of the river around Fort Meigs.

“The balance of the men under your command must land on the right bank opposite the first landing and will fight their way through the Indians to the Fort.” Observing that the route was thus to be taken would be shown by a subaltern officer then in company with capt. Hamilton who would land his pirogue at the point, on the right bank at which the boats could land.

The order of descending the river in boats was the same as the order of march on line of battle in solid columns; each officer taking position according to his rank. Col. Dudley the oldest colonel led the van, and in this order the river had been descended.

As soon as capt. Hamilton had delivered these orders, being in the 13th boat from the front, I directed him to proceed immediately to col. Dudley & ordered him to take the men in the 12 front boats, & execute gen. Harrison's orders on the left bank of the river, & post his [capt. Hamilton's] subaltern on the right bank, to conduct myself with the men in the six rear boats to the fort. I ordered the five boats in the rear of me to fall in a line and follow me.

High wind and the rapidity of the current drove four of the rear boats ashore in the attempt to follow on, according to order, where they remained a short time, sufficient how ever to detain them half or three quarters of a mile in the rear.

To land according to order, I kept close along the right bank until opposite to col. Dudley's landing. There I found no guide left to conduct me to the fort, as captain Hamilton had promised. I then made an attempt to cross the river and join col. Dudley but from the rapid current in the falls, I was unable to land on the point with him.

Being nearly half way across the river, and the waves running too high to risk the boats, then driving down the current sideways, veered about and rowed the best way we could to save our boat. My attempt to cross the river to col. Dudley occasioned, I presume, all the boats in the rear of Commanding a detachment under Dudley, 19-year-old captain Leslie Combs was wounded and captured during the fighting. Later paroled, Combs returned to Kentucky and became a prominent attorney in Lexington and a longtime state legislator.

me and which were then out of hailing distance to cross over and land with colonel Dudley.

Having been defeated in a landing on the left, we then endeavored to effect it on the right even without a guide. But before a landing could be effected we received a brisk fire from the enemy on the shore, which was returned and kept up on both sides, and I was in this unavoidable situation compelled to make to fort Meigs with no other force than about fifty men on board (the other boats being still in the rear) and to receive the enemy's fire until we arrived under protection of the fort.

Colonel Boswell's command (except the men in my boat) having landed to join col. Dudley was (as I have been informed) ordered by capt. Hamilton immediately to re-embark & land on the right hand shore about a mile above the fort and prepare to fight his way into the garrison. The colonel embarked and landed as he conceived at the proper point pursuant to capt. Hamilton's order, and was forming his men in order of battle, when he was met by capt. Shaw & ordered to march into the garrison in open order the safest route.

When my own boat landed we were met by two men, who took charge of the boat as we understood to bring her under the protection of the fort batteries.

Believing our baggage to be thus made safe, we forbid our servants to carry any portion of it, but loaded them with cannon ball, which they bore to the fort. Our baggage was, however taken by the Indians in a very short time after we left the boat.

Upon receiving the orders of capt. Hamilton, I asked if he had brought spikes to spike the enemy's cannon, to which he replied he had plenty.

*I am, Sir, respectfully
Your most obedient servant,
GREEN CLAY, Brig. Gen.*

Maj. Gen. William Henry Harrison watched as Lt. Col. William Dudley captured and spiked the British cannon aimed at Fort Meigs, then—contrary to orders—led his men into an Indian ambush. The future president respected the Kentuckians' "ardor" but not their foolhardiness.

*His Excellency, Major General

P. S. Captain Hamilton is delivering the orders of Gen. Harrison observed, that the object of landing and marching a portion of the troops on the right bank was to draw the attention of the Indians, and by thus engaging them, afford an opportunity to the garrison to make a sally and by a circuitous rout, surprise and carry the batteries and cannon of the enemy below the fort on the right bank.

G. CLAY, Brig. Gen. ²

In his report to Harrison, Clay failed to make any mention of the defeat of Dudley's command. It can only be assumed that his failure was due to the fact that he was not present at the battle and the massacre which followed and did not have first hand knowledge as to what had happened. The following is the narrative by Lt. Joseph R. Underwood, of Capt. John C. Morrison's Company, of what occurred with Dudley's command:

The whole number of troops that landed amounted probably to 700 men. We were formed on the shore in three parallel lines, and ordered to march for the battery at right angles with the river.

So far as I understand the plan of attack, one line was to form the line of battle in the rear of the battery parallel with the river; the other two lines to form one above and one below the battery, at right angles to the river. The lines thus formed advanced as silently as possible, the object being to surprise the enemy. Before we reached the battery, however, we were discovered by some straggling Indians, who fired upon us and then retreated. Our men, pleased at seeing them run, and perceiving that we were discovered, no longer deemed silence necessary, and raised a tremendous shout. This was the first intimation that the enemy received of our approach, and it so alarmed them that they abandoned the battery without any resistance, and the guns were successfully spiked. Capt. Morrison's company was formed on the river's bank above the battery. While passing through a hazel thicket toward the river, I saw Col. Dudley for the last time; he railed at me for not keeping my men in better line; I replied that it was impossible, owing to the condition of the ground and the obstacles in the way. We halted near the river bank; some of the enemy had got into our rear and were firing into us, and our company hastened to join the combatants at our front; falling in at the left of the regiment, we were soon in the conflict. The Indians attempted to flank us, and we drove them over a mile back from the river; from behind trees and logs, they poured a most destructive fire into us, and we charged upon them from time to time. Capt. Morrison fell, shot through the temples, the ball cutting the optic nerve and depriving him of sight. After caring for him as well as circumstances would allow, I assumed command of the company.

At length we were ordered to fall back, keeping up a retreating fire, and as soon as this was done, the Indians advanced with savage yells. A temporary halt was twice made, but our ranks were soon in confusion, and a general rout occurred; the retreating army gathered about the battery and attempted to repel the onslaught. About this time, I received a ball in my back and was made a prisoner, and informed that the whole army had surrendered.

On our way to the garrison, we were stripped of the principal part of our clothing and valuables. As we neared the garrison at Ft. Miami, the Indians formed a line to the left of the road, there being a perpendicular bank on the right, near where the road passed. Here we were obliged to run the gauntlet into the fort, the Indians whipping, shooting and tomahawking their prisoners as they passed. By running as closely as possible to the muzzles of their guns, I escaped with the exception of some severe strokes over the back with their ramrods. Nearly forty Americans were killed in passing the line of savages. As I entered the

The Indian leader Tecumseh rode to the rescue of Dudley's Kentuckians as they were being massacred at what came to be known as the "Slaughter Pens." When British Maj. Gen. Henry Proctor, who had witnessed the murder of the unarmed prisoners, told Tecumseh he couldn't control the situation, the enraged Indian leader screamed "You are unfit to command; go and put on petticoats."

ditch surrounding the garrison, the man in front of me was shot and I fell over his dead body; those following stumbled over us, and the passageway was thus blocked for a few moments. After entering the fort, the horrible tragedy was continued. A painted Indian mounted the dilapidated wall and shot one of the prisoners nearest him, and deliberately loading, shot again, the second ball giving two men a death wound; he then laid down his gun, and drawing his tomahawk, leaped among the defenseless prisoners and killed two others. The horror of the moment is indescribable; the excitement among the Indians was increasing, and a wholesale massacre seemed inevitable, as the weak protest of the British officers who were present, was entirely unavailing.³

The total number of Kentucky troops massacred at Dudley's Defeat and in what the Kentucky troops gave the appellation of "slaughter pen," might have been far more devastating had it not been for the intervention of the great Indian leader, Tecumseh.

While this blood-thirsty carnage was raging, a thundering voice was heard in the rear, in the Indian tongue, and Tecumseh was seen coming with all the rapidity his horse could carry him. Drawing near to where two Indians were in the act of killing one of the prisoners, he sprang from his horse, caught one by the throat and the other by the breast and threw them to the ground; drawing his tomahawk and scalping knife, he ran in between the Americans and Indians, brandishing them with the fury of a madman, and daring any of the hundreds who surrounded him to attempt to murder another prisoner. They all appeared confused and immediately desisted. His mind appeared rent with passion, and he exclaimed almost with tears in his eyes, "Oh, what will become of my Indians!"

He then demanded, in an authoritative tone, where Proctor was, and nervously casting his eyes about and seeing that officer at a short distance, he sternly inquired why he had not put a stop to the inhuman massacre. "Sir," said Proctor, "your Indians cannot be commanded." "Begone!" retorted Tecumseh, in the greatest disdain; "you are unfit to command; go and put on petticoats."⁴

In referring to Dudley's command in his official report on the first siege of Fort Meigs, Gen. Harrison made the following comment:

It rarely occurs that a general has to complain of the excessive ardor of his men, yet such appears always to be the case whenever the Kentucky militia

are engaged; it is, indeed, the source of all their misfortunes; Dudley unsuccessfully attempted to restrain their rash ardor; such temerity is scarcely less fatal, although not so disgraceful, as cowardice.⁵

The first siege of Fort Meigs was lifted on 9 May 1813, with the retreat of British-Indian forces, leaving Harrison and the American Army still in possession of the fort. On 11 May a detachment of men were sent across the river from Fort Meigs in search of the bodies of the men killed in the battle of the 5th. They returned with 45 bodies that were laid out before the one of the fort's gates. One of the members of the detachment sent to recover bodies of the men massacred in Fort Miami wrote the following:

My face turned white as snow when I looked down over the fort and saw more than a hundred of my fellow comrades all lying in one mass of blood, so that it was impossible to recognize my most intimate companion.⁶

The next day they were buried with military honors.

All the cannon were fired in slow succession, and their deep reverberations [sic] rolled echoing in solemn cadence along the valley. The bodies of about forty-five heroes of Dudley's command were recovered and buried on the brow of the hill about fifty yards northeast of the east angle of the fort. Their graves still remain undisturbed, covered with green sod, and a dead walnut tree is the only monument which marks the sacred spot.⁷

Of the 846 men in Dudley's command, approximately 170 escaped death or capture crossing the Maumee River to the safety of Fort Meigs, the remainder being killed or taken prisoner. Over the next few days prisoners were exchanged or released into the wilderness to make their way back to civilization. The below lists of Kentucky's casualties and prisoners of war for the battles of 5 May 1813, though far from complete and accurate, are derived from available sources. We may never have an accurate listing.

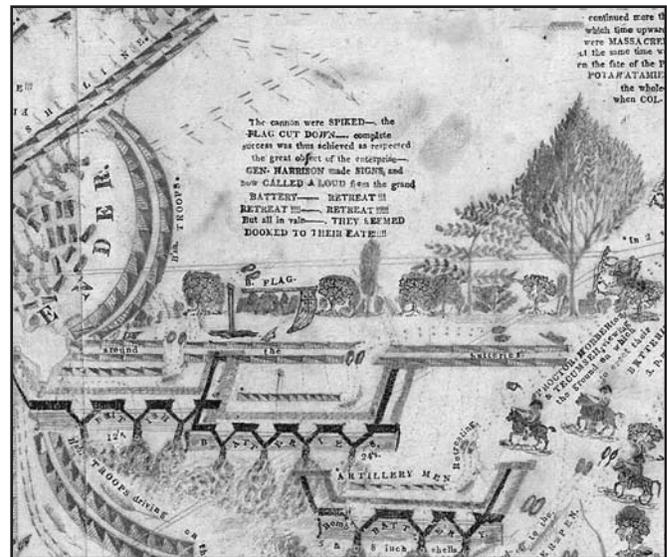

Today the site of "Dudley's Defeat" is home to the Maumee branch of the Toledo-Lucas County Public Library. A historical marker in front of library tells the story of the massacre that occurred there nearly 200 years ago.⁸

DUDLEY'S MASSACRE

Here on May 5, 1813
Colonel Dudley's troops spiked the British artillery besieging
Fort Meigs; but in the exhilaration of Victory they were led into ambush
Where over 600 was lost.

The bittersweet victory of the first siege of Fort Meigs and "Dudley's Defeat" are best summed up in the words of Capt. William Sebree of Colonel Boswell's Regiment:

The cannon were SPIKED— the FLAG CUT DOWN— complete success was thus achieved as respected the great object of the enterprise— GEN. HARRISON made SIGNS, and now CALLED A LOUD from the grand BATTERY— RETREAT!!! RETREAT!!!! RE-

After achieving their objective to capture and spike the British guns, Dudley and his men could not be induced to move toward the protection of Fort Meigs. "They seemed," said Capt. William Sebree, "Doomed to their fate."

TREAT!!!! But all in vain— THEY SEEMED DOOMED TO THEIR FATE!!!!⁹

In trying to understand what occurred at Dudley's Defeat, historian L.F. Johnson said:

The characteristics of the Kentucky soldier were such that he was never amenable to discipline, as were men of less information. As a rule, the Kentucky private soldier was ranked as high in the social scale at home as the men whom he chose to command him in the field. From a social and intellectual standpoint they were equals at home—sometimes the private soldier may have held a higher rank—and it was difficult for the private to realize that it was the duty of his officers to do most of his thinking for him. Then, too, the private reasoned that he had entered the service to fight the enemy, and when an opportunity presented to do so, he did not understand why he should not make the most of it. ...

BOOK NOTES

Books on Kentucky genealogy and history contributed to the KHS library by authors, publishers, and compilers

Adventurers of Purse and Person, Virginia, 1607-1624/5. (2005. Pp. 1,111. Hardcover, $89.50, plus $3.50 postage and handling. Order from Genealogical Publishing Co. Inc., 1001 N. Calvert Street, Baltimore, MD 21202-3897, or via the Internet at: GenealogyBookShop.com.)

Prepared under the auspices of the Order of First Families of Virginia in anticipation of the 400th anniversary of the founding of Jamestown, this new edition of Adventurers of Purse and Person extends the lines of descent of the founding families documented in previous editions from four generations to six, bringing most families down to the Revolutionary or early Federal periods. The purpose of the work is to establish descents of the approximately 150 individuals who can be identified as (1) Adventurers of Purse (i.e. stockholders in the Virginia Company of London who either came to Virginia in the period 1607–1625 and had descendants or who did not come to Virginia during that period but whose grandchildren were resident there; or (2) Adventurers of Person, 1607–1625 (i.e. immigrants to Virginia who left descendants).

The foundation of the work is the famous “Muster” of January–February 1624–25—essentially a census taken by the Royal Commission which succeeded the Virginia Company to determine the extent and composition of the Jamestown settlements. In the Muster, which is reproduced in entirety in Volume One, the name of each colonist appears with the location of his home and the number in his family, together with information about his stock of food, his supply of arms and ammunition, his boats, houses, and livestock. In all, about 1,200 persons are named in the Muster, of whom approximately 150 are shown in this work to have left descendants to the sixth generation.

In addition to the Muster, this work builds on the investigations of dozens of scholars, correcting, revising, and supplementing the best genealogical scholarship of the past half century. New discoveries, newly available information, and a further reevaluation of evidence concerning previously accepted relationships have led, in some instances, to wholesale changes in the accepted genealogies. In consequence, this fourth edition brings together the results of all the most recent scholarship on these families, expanding the limits of what is presently known and opening up possibilities for research beyond the sixth generation.

Numerous Kentuckians are listed, including Charles Gorsuch (d. 18 June 1813), a son of Benjamin Gorsuch and a Revolutionary War soldier, who moved to Mason County and married Delia Dimmit in December 1784.

Surnames include Gaither, Gaskins, Gilbert, Gookin, Gosnold, Granger, Graves, Gray, Grendon, Gundry, Hallom, Hampton, Hansford, Harris, Harwood, Holt, Hooe, Hopkins, Johnson-Travis, Jordan, Kent, Kingsmill, Knott, Laydon, Lloyd, Lovelace-Gorsuch, Lukin, Lupo, Macock, Martiau, Mason, Mathews, Menefie, Montague, Moone, Moore, Offley, O’Neil-Robins, Osborne, Pace, Paramore, Pead, Peirce, Peirse, Perry, Pierce-Bennett, Price, Price-Llewellyn, and Purifoy.

Shepherd, Stone

Seeking information on the origins of Dickey Shepherd, who married 1. Betsy Stone on 19 December 1810 in Fayette County and 2. Margaret Stone (Betsy's sister) on 27 October 1818 in Fayette County. Since Shepherd's later life is documented, I desire information on his whereabouts before 1813. He appears tax lists of Clark County (1813-15), Fayette County (1818, 1822-26), and Woodford County (1819, 1827-34). Where was Dickey Shepherd born and who were his parents? The 1850 Census (Clinton County, Ind.) records his birthplace as Virginia.

Camp on 1 January 1826 in Allen County, Ky. Camp was a physician and a Baptist minister. He had a land warrant for 50 acres on Trammell Creek in Allen County on 14 November 1826. The couple were in Warrick County, Ind., by 1830. There is no record of Elizabeth's parents in Warren County. Did they remain in Allen County?

I am searching for descendants of these families and other descendants of the Long Run Massacre, Sept. 1781. Many families fled from Squire Boone's Painted Stone Station in Shelby County to Louisville's Linn Station. A descendant recognition is planned for an annual re-enactment of this event. For more information follow the links at www.graphicenterprises.net. I also have a list of 91 names of people living at Painted Stone Station, which include Brackett, Bryan, Cline, Eastwood, Hinton, Seamon, Tyler and Underwood.

Ryan, Hamilton

Seeking information about Hugh Ryan (b. 23 December 1838, County Cork, Ireland, d. 8 November 1884), who married Catherine Hamilton on 14 October 1858. He lived in Nicholas County, Ky., and was a blacksmith and gunsmith. Need to find out his parents' names, plus any additional information available.

Park

Please help me determine the identity and lineage of "Mrs. George Park," who is briefly discussed in the French Tipton Papers (I, p. 81), in an article on the Collins family. It is written that "She chewed parch corn for children during the Siege of 1778 and used to stand on entrails of deer and cattle to warm her feet." I believe her husband could be related to my fifth-great grandfather Ebenezer Park Sr. (1747-1839) of Madison County. Like Ebenezer, he may have come to Kentucky from Rowan County, N.C., by way of old Frederick County, Va.
