Warren County and fined twenty five dollars. and sentenced to ten days jail imprisonment. January 1912.

The Governor's Proclamation.

Various General Assemblies of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. realizing that Kentucky is a great agricultural State and that a majority of her people are engaged in agricultural pursuits. have from time to time made appropriations and provisions for upbuilding a great State Fair within her borders. and the city of Louisville, the County of Jefferson and patriotic citizens supplementing the States donations, have made possible the securing of ground and erection of buildings until the State Fair plant represents approximately a $300,000. investment, all of which has been done for the purpose of exploiting Kentucky's agricultural and live stock resources. and while other States have made more liberal provisions for their State fairs than Kentucky, yet Kentucky has naturally more fertile fields, better live stock and a people better adapted to agricultural pursuits so that it has made her famous along agricultural and live stock lines and has made possible a State Fair ranking with the best in the land. and the State Board of Agriculture, that has under its auspices the holding of the Kentucky State Fair, has made extended provisions for making the tenth annual session that opens September 9th and continues for six days, the greatest in the history of this institution and an exhibit worthy of the State of Kentucky and to which they invite all to come. I. as Governor of the State of Kentucky, call upon all those interested in the development of the State to lay aside, wherever possible, their usual occupations and visit at least once during the week the tenth annual Kentucky State Fair. I believe in the development of agriculture and in the education of the people along progressive lines. It is good for our citizens to meet and compare products of their own labors with those of their neighbors; to study the economic production of agricultural and live stock products; to view the "show window" of Kentucky's resources and to draw encouragement from the work of others as well as to enjoy the amusement features. A day spent away from the farm or business is not always a day lost. but frequently proves an inspiration for better better living and furnishes a broader view point for progressive effort.

The Governor this day issued Fire Day, Proclamation. The losses by fire in this country of insured and uninsured property, total every year more than two hundred million dollars, and are largely in excess of that of any other civilized nation. This is a loss which can be curtailed by proper precaution. The large payments by insurance companies, as well as the enormous personal loss of property which is uninsured, is an expense which should be decreased. The reduction of the fire loss would naturally tend to reduce the expense of the protection afforded by fire insurance companies and like organizations, and thus inure to the benefit of those who avail themselves of this form of protection. It is our duty, as good citizens, to do all within our power to prevent this waste and needless loss of property; and it is, therefor, the part of wisdom to join with the people of other States in setting aside a day in which we bring to public attention this important duty. The Legislature has enacted Laws for the punishment of the crime of arson, but it is not always the crime of arson that produces these losses. It is frequently carelessness, negligence, or the failure to exercise due precaution. The losses in Kentucky by fire, on which insurance was paid last year, was 3.692.306.23; the premiums paid to secure fire insurance last year was 5.272.438.57; and these figures do not begin to cover the unprotected waste by fire. Now, therefor, I call upon the citizens of Kentucky to set aside October 8th 1912, as a day on which to give special attention to the removal from their premises of rubbish which might cause fire, for placing heating appliances in proper condition, the examination of chimneys, flues and such other appliances which so frequently are the direct cause of fire losses, to look into premises where articles which might produce spontaneous combustion are kept, and for the distruction of ignitible material deposited in places where it might endanger property by fire. I further recommend that, on that day, instructions be given to the pupils in public and private schools concerning the exercise of care in the use of matches and all combustible materials, and that laborers in factories and other places of industry be duly cautioned on this subject.

Arbor Day Proclamation.

I, James B. McCreary, Governor of the commonwealth, do issue this Proclamation, designating Wednesday, November thirteenth, nineteen hundred and twelve, as Arbor Day for the commonwealth of Kentucky, and request its observance by the Planting of Trees and such other appropriate exercises as may be deemed proper. The attention of all the people, and especially the teachers and pupils of all the Colleges and schools, is called to the importance of planting trees. A priceless heritage has been wasted in Kentucky, and we should try to do our duty by making every proper effort for a renewal of our forests. Other States are giving much attention to Arbor Day. In one State over one million trees were planted on one Arbor Day, and the benefit derived in other States by planting trees was great. More attention should be given to the proper observance of Arbor Day in Kentucky than has been given heretofore. Trees planted on the next Arbor Day will add to the beauty of the neighborhood, and to the wealth and welfare of the future, and supply the increasing need in many parts of the State. School house yards, home yards and Public roads should be beautified with trees. Our natural forests are diminishing, and we must not only save what is left of the forests, but we must re-forest the cut-over, the burnt-over and the un-forested districts of the State.

The Governor this day issued a Proclamation in re: Tuberculosis Day. Medical men, who have devoted much time to the study, now agree that tuberculosis is both preventive and curable, and that a large part of the sickness and fatality incident thereto can and should be avoided. The ravages of consumption represent terrible destruction of life, destroying over two hundred thousand persons each year. an organized fight is being made in the United States looking towards its amelioration or extinction, and a National Tuberculosis Day is being observed throughout the Union. According to the reports of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, during the first seven months of 1911, 6,085 cases of tuberculosis were under treatment by physicians of Kentucky. In the same period 3.325 deaths were reported. It is hoped and believed that it will be beneficial to designate a National Tuberculosis Day, and in order that the people of Kentucky may earnestly engage in a most laudible effort, all individuals and all philanthropic organizations are requested to observe October twenty-seventh as Tuberculosis Day, in making every proper effort and in spreading every form of information as to the character, Prevention and cure of tuberculosis.
